M AD A M,
IT is with great gratitude and thankfulness I announce to you, that I have been cured of an inveterate Scuryey, by the use of your excellent Drops, after having been afflicted 13 years, and dispairing of ever being able to find any relief, as all the means I had used proved ineffectual. When I first commenced taking your invaluable medicine, I could scarce get my living;
but after I had taken only one bottle, I found a confiderable alteration, which encouraged me to perfever; and, by the belsing of God, I am now restored to perfect health,

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FEBRUARY 15.

The report of the Committee to whom it was referred to confider of the grant to Lord St Vincent and Lord Duncan was brought up, and the resolutions therein contained were read twice, and bills ordered accordingly.

The order of the day for the third reading of the

Supplementary Militia Bill being read,
Sir John Sinclair faid, that before the bill be read he would put a question to Ministers, to which he hoped for a fatisfactory answer. The preamble of the bill fet out with stating, "That whereas it is expedient to call out half the Supplementary Militia."—When the bill was first brought in he was not in the House, and therefore could not, as he would have done had he been fo, make an objection to it on the fcore of the preamble running in that way without fusficient grounds for it being laid before the House, and he thought that the words should rather be "it may be" than "it is." -From the aspect of public affairs, he conceived that not merely balf but all the Supplementary Militia ought to be called out. It was known that the enemy were making great preparations; and it was incumbent on us to make equal preparations to relift them.

Mr Dundas faid, that he did not view the words of the preamble in the way they were considered by the Honourable Baronet-he had, however, no objection to the words being changed from " it is" to " it may be" -at the same time he reminded the Honourable Baronet that it was not necessary to provide in this bill for calling out the whole supplementary militia, as a power was vested in the Crown for that purpose by the former

The bill was then read a third time with the amendment fuggested by Sir John Sinclair, and passed.

Colonel WALPOLE defired to be informed whether fince he had last mentioned the business, any step had been taken respecting the Maroons, who had been sent from Jamaica to Nova Scotia?

Mr Dundas faid, fince the Honourable Gentleman had mentioned the Maroons, he had looked over the papers respecting them, and would fave the Honourable Gentleman the trouble of making a motion on that head, by laying before the House extracts of the correspondence between the Secretary of State and Governor Wentworth on the occasion, and he concluded by moving to that effect.

Colonel WALFOLE faid, he had no objection to the correspondence of Governor Wentworth being laid upon the table, and he had a great respect for the Governor's opinion; but it happened that the Maroons themselves, who were much better judges of their own condition, were of a very different opinion from the Governor on that subject; and they declared that their sufferings were intolerable, that they could not bear the extreme cold of Nova Scotia; that their wives and children were still less able to bear it, and they begged that they might be removed, or elfe, if they were placed there merely for the purpose of punishment, that they might be hanged at once, and their wives and children be fent to a warmer climate. The Colonel concluded by moving, that a paper, intitled, "The petition of the Maroons," and dated the 12th of August, 1797, be laid before the House.

Mr Dundas faid, that petition would be found among the papers which had been already moved to be upon the table.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER moved, that the Committee of Finance, which had been appointed for next Monday, be postponed to Wednesday, which

Mr THORNTON faid, that an honourable friend of his (Mr Manning) had given notice of a motion this week, for a lift of the subscribers to the voluntary contribution at the Bank: In the absence of that gentle man, and by his defire, he postponed the motion to next week, in consequence of the contributions slowing in fast, and his wishing to give more time to gentlemen. -Adjourned.

At the close of the levee, a Chapter of the most Ho-nourable Order of the Bath was held, to invest Admiral Colpoys with the red ribbon worn by the late Sin William Gordon. The procession passed from the King's levee room to the great Council Chamber; the follow-attending according to their feniority:

His Royal Highneis the DUKE of YORK, Grand Mafter.

Lord Lavington, Sir George Yonge,

Sir William Howe, Lord Bridport,

The Rev. Dr Horsley, Bishop of Rochester, Denn of the Order; and Sir Isaac Heard, Knight, Gentleman Usher of the Red Rod. The Admiral being introduced between the fenior and junior Knights, knelt down, and received the honour of knighthood by the title of Sir John Colpoys. The Sovereign then put the ribbon over his shoulder. The order of the Chapter being read by the Dean, and the new Knight having had the honour to kifs his Majesty's hand, the ceremony concluded.

The Right Hon, Earl Fitzwilliam was fworn in Lord Lieutenant and Custos Rotulorum of the West Riding of Yorkshire, in the room of the Duke of Norfolk. His Majesty also conferred on the Noble Earl the Colonelcy of the first battalion of the Yorkshire militia, vacated by the above refignation.

Yesterday the Duke of Norfolk, who was not at the levee on Wednesday, was at Court, and staid almost the whole time of the Drawing-room.

On Tuesday there was a meeting at Mr. Pitt's of several gentlemen connected with the shipping and mer-cantile interest, at which Lord Spencer and Mr Nepean were present. Their object was to consider of a propriety of a small tax on all shipping failing under convoy which is to be paid in proportion to the value of the ship and freight.

Wednesday, a Court of Directors was held at the East India House.

The Court voted the fum of 200 guineas to the fund for the support of the widows and orphans of the seamen who fell in the victory obtained by Earl St Vincents over the Spaniards.

Eleven hundred thousand pounds stock, in the name of the Lords Regents of Hanover, is in the three per cent. confols.

The Earl of Clare, Lord Chancellor of Ireland, arrived on Wednesday morning in town, and immediately went to Burlington-house: His Lordship's visit to London is faid to be of an urgent nature: he could not have quitted his Court of Chancery, with his Parliamentary duty, at fuch a crifis, on flight grounds.

It is faid a change of system has been adopted in eland. This change we understand originated in the opinion given by General Sir Ralph Abercombie, who as been making the tour of Ireland, and inspecting the military posts. Conciliatory measures are now to be adopted, and we hope that this lenient disposition of Government will have its effect in quieting the minds of the people of that country, and in restoring tranquil-lity. We understand that Lord Camden adopts the fentiments of General Abercrombie, in opposition to those of the Lord Chancellor Clare, who is reported to be come over to England to represent the danger of a change of fystem.

It was last night reported, that Government had it n contemplation to fend Lord Fitzwilliam again to Ireland, with full and unequivocal powers to make fuch concessions to the oppressed people of that country as he should deem meet for its preservation, and the restor-ation of tranquillity.—Of this, however, we cannot speak with confidence.

Four Hamburgh mails remain due.

EAST INDIA HOUSE.

Yesterday a General Court was held at the India House, at the requisition of eleven Proprietors, for the purpose of considering the propriety of a subscription to the books now opened for receiving contributions for the defence of the country; the letter having been read,

The following motion of Mr Alderman Lushington being seconded by Mr Henchman, was carried unanimoully, viz.
Refolved, That this Court, anxious to give a new proof, in addition to the many instances already on record during this war, of their generous loyalty to the constitution and government, by subscribing to the voluntary contribution for the defence of the country, lament their being prevented from giving effect to such a measure by the restrictions of an act of Parliament, and that they would most cheerfully have subscribed upon any principle bearing on the general funds of the Company, in which, undoubtedly, they have the first and most important stake.

PORTUGAL.

We understand from the most respectable authority, that Government received advices from Lifbon, on Tuesday last, stating, that the Court of Portugal had at ed a treaty of peace with the French Republic. This news is confirmed to us by letters brought over from Paris in the last packet, and which add, that the terms granted by the Directory are gene-rous and liberal. We are not disposed to doubt the fact, because in more than one instance the first terms granted to a suppliant enemy have done honour to the French name; but is there a fingle instance, of late, where they have not feized on some pretext to go beyond the preliminary treaty, and to new-model the Government of which they became the friend ?

SWITZERLAND.

One of the passengers by the vessel which brought over our last French journals, a native of Switzerland, but settled in business at Hamburgh, and who is known to be a man of great respectability by many persons in London, states that the revolution with which Switzerland has been so long threatened, is at length effected. The following are the details which we are at present ena-

General Menard, on his entrance into the Pays de Vaud, fignified to those who were at the head of the infurrection, that he was without means to provide for the substitence of his troops, and that unless he was speedily supplied with them, he could not answer for the conduct of his soldiers. The sum of 800,000 livres was immediately raifed, which proved sufficient for the momentary wants of the army.

The inhabitants of the Cantons, alarmed at the march of the French troops, and defirous to prevent the effufion of blood, entered into a treaty with the French General, the refult of which was the destruction of the Ancient Confederacy, and a proclamation was published nouncing the formation of the Helvetic Republic, and indivisible, which is to be divided into 40 Can or Districts, under the direction of one general Cou or Directory, to hold its fittings at Soleure or Lucen It is not yet afcertained which of these places is to the capital of the new Republic.

THE COURT OF SESSION, AS COMMISSIONERS OF TEINDS.

The Lords of Sellion, in their capacity of Commiffloners for Teinds, have lately decided a queftion of very general importance, both to the landed interest and the clergy of this country. In a variety of processes of augmentation and locality of thipends before the Court, the two following questions had occurred: tion, have been paid in money, and of course where the teinds were properly valued in money, is it competent for the Course to local and in money, is tent for the Court to local a victual stipend upon such teinds? And, Secondly, Where the rents at the time of the valuation were payable in grain, but where the tends have been nevertheless valued in money, was it competent in that case for the Court to local upon such

In the process of augmentation of Lamington, and in that of the locality of Skene, the Court, with a view of fettling these points, having ordered full memorials, and afterwards confidered the question upon petition and answers, on the first of them, (and which occurred in Lamington) found that victual stipend may be allocated upon heritors, whose teinds are valued in money, the value of the victual being in the present, or any si milar case, computed at a medium of the fiar prices of the county, which have been struck for the last feven years preceding the interlocutor of augmentation, with this explanation, that as the stock cannot be encreached upon, it shall be optional to any heritor, instead of delivering and paying the quantity of victual and money flipend thus laid upon him at any time, to give up and pay in all time thereafter to the minister, the whole of his valued teind, according as the same shall have been afcertained by his decreet of valuation. In the other case of Skene, in which the second point courred, a fummons of reduction had been raifed at the inflance of the minister, for setting aside the decree of valuation, as having been obtained disconform to the mode in which the rents were paid at the time of it. In that case the Court pronounced an interlocutor in the same terms with the above in the augmentation of Lamington, with this addition, that before deciding in the reduction now mentioned, both parties were ordained to give in memorials upon the reasons of reduction. Counfel for the heritors, the Hon. Henry Erskine, Mr Charles Hay, and Mr Adam Gillies .- Agents, Mess. George Robinson, and Robert Ainslie, writers to the fignet.

COUNTY OF EDINBURGH.

Mr TYTLER introduced this motion, by a very elegant and apposite speech.

TWO PENNIES IN THE PINT.

Upon former occasions we have mentioned, that it was in agitation, to take off the duty of two pennies in the pint on ale and beer, leviable within the city of Edinhurgh. In lieu of that, it was proposed to substi-tute a duty on teas and spirits consumed in the city.— This however, was opposed by the grocers and spirit dealers as a tax, partial, oppressive, and not likely to be effectual—Committees from the parties concerned were appointed to consider the matter, and on Saturday, a report was given in to the county meeting. It feemed to be the unanimous sentiment of all the gentlemen, that the duty of two pennies in the pint, on ale and beer, should be taken off, and that a tax on spirits thould be fubfituted in its place. It was however, a matter of fome difficulty to determine, in what shape this should be leviyed, whether it ought to be entirely local and exigible by the Magistrates of Edinburgh, or general on the distilleries in Scotland, and leviable by Government, in which latter case, the Government to allow a certain fum to be payable to those burghs, who at present hold a power of leveying the two pennies

Much reasoning took place, in which all seemed to acquiece that every encouragement ought to be held out for the using of brewed liquors in preference to liquors distilled, as tending to preserve theirealth and morals of the people.

The following refolutions were then adopted :-

Refolved, 1mo, That it is wife and expedient to encourage the confumption of brewed liquors in preference to spirituous liquors, it being found that the immoderate use of spirits has had very pernicious effects on the health, the morals, and the industry of the peo-

3tio, That the County are fatisfied that the City of Edinburgh labours under a debt of 72,000l. and certain annual falaries to Profesfors and Ministers, which will require a fund producing at least 4000l. per annum; and they are of opinion, and humbly submit to the wisdom of Parliament, that it would be an expedient and proper measure to take away the whole local imposts on beer and ale in Scotland, which in all amount to a sum under 9000l. per annum.

And, as Government will derive great increase of revenue on the ale, beer, and malt, that the towns having grants at prefent fhould be allowed out of the public revenues collected by the Excise annual sums equal to the average amount of their respective grants.

This measure, they are convinced will increase the

In the latitudes of 45. and 44, deg. we had a very heavy gale of wind, which feparated part of our convoy. We are now between 30 and 40 fail fewer, than when we fet out, but part of them were bound to Lifbon; we can still count 85 to 86 fail. We have had very fine weather for the last few days, and from the care and attention of our Commodore, I have no doubt of our keeping altogether for the rest of our voyage, which there is every prospect of being short. I subjoin a note of the names of the Clyde vessels which we have feen since the gale, as well as the names of those who we suspect parted with us at that time. COMMITTEE FOR CONDUCTING THE VOLUNTA-RY CONTRIBUTION FOR THE DEFENCE OF THE COUNTRY.

ment in which the French Directory broke off the late Negociation, on grounds equally unreasonable in themselves, and arrogant and insulting in the form in which they were stated, it was obvious that they had determined against any Peace with Great Britain; and that they had resolved to firain every nerve, and to use every desperate means which their unbounded arbitrary power over their own country assords for the ruin and destruction of ours. But they have not left this defign to be gathered from inference or supposition; they have now declared, by solemn addresses and proclamations, that the only object left to be accomplished by the arms of France is the Conquest of Great Britain; they have opened a Loan on the fecurity of its spoils, and have fet on soot a subscription for defraying the expense of a descent, which they publicly aunounce defraying the expense of a defcent, which they publicly authorities as an attack against the property, the laws, and the constitution

In this critical fituation, it is obviously the interest as well as the duty of every British subject, to make the most resolute and firenous exertion in defence of himself, his samily, and his country. We do not now contend, as has in former times been the esse, for distant conquests; for settlements advantageous to strade; for harburar commodious to navigation: We are now to struggle for our existence as a nation, or for every thing that makes existence valuable; and to this necessity we are driven by the relentless harred of the enemy, who neither offer now admit any conditions, or any terms of compromise, on which ven by the relentless hatred of the enemy, who neither offer nor admit any conditions, or any terms of compromise, on which she contest can be avoided.

For the defence and protection of the country the most effectual measures have been adopted, and are at present carrying into execution by government. There never was, at any period, nearly fo great an armed force on shore, and never (thanks to the noble exertions of our gallant feamen) so decidedly superior, a seer at fer: But in the prosecution of war, money is as necessary as men; and those ficets and armies which sight in our defence must be paid and provided for by the country they defend. Of this the enemy are abundantly sensible, and hope find. Of this the enemy are abundantly sensible, and those familds the desperation of their own circumstances, and that determined ruin which they scruple not to bring on their own commerce and manufactures, to wear us out by the continuance of hostilities, which we must repel at a great and unavoidable expense.

But although the expence be confiderable, the facrifices, when thy confidered, are in truth far from being very great. At a moment the nation is more flourishing, in point of agriculte, of manufactures, and of commerce, than at any former than the property of the state of the s juffly confidered, are in truth far from being very great. At this moment the nation is more flourishing, to point of agriculture, of manufactures, and of commerce, than at any former period of its history. But his resources must be brought into immediate activity, by means which individuals will sometimes feel as hardships. Loans must be made on unfavourable terms; and to provide funds for the interest of those loans, taxes must be imposed, of which the community, or part of the community, may complain as burthensome. It is clearly very much the interest of the nation (and figures have shewn it undeniably in every newspaper in the kingdom) to limit, at the present time, when interest is so high, those loans as much as possible, by an immediate advance of the capital som required.—For this purpose, the late me-sure of an assessment on each person's income, as far as an estimate of that income could be formed by the best rule of judging to which Government could refort, was adopted; but, in order not to press hard upon the less opulent classes of the people, limitations and exceptions were introduced into this plan, which will probably occasion a considerable diminution of the sum it was calculated to produce. It must be obvious also, that some of the richer classes, and of those most able to afford a contribution to the exigencies of the State, cannot be affected by this mode of affestment, which could only be proportioned to a species of income or expenditure seen or capable of estimation by the Public. Of this description are men of large monied capitals, without families, or in situations which do not occasion, or lead to, an expense in living nearly adequate to their sortenes, to come forward with a voluntary substruction, at present so the sund the political existence of the fate. This measure has been justly termed a similar premium of unurance, to secure the whole of our remaining property. The rich and opulent are cherefore more particularly superested in it.

But it is not from the rich only that such

But it is not from the rich only that fuch contributions may be expected. Perfons of every fation and condition, we are confident, will readily come forward in aid of this measure, as their ability and circumstances may allow. As the danger is general, so will be the defire to contribute to repel it t and those whom the projected invasion of the enemy would plunder of the produce of their farms, of the savings of their trade, nay, from whom it would cut off the very employments by which their bread and the fublishence of their families are carned, will cherfully part with a certain portion of that produce, or of those favings, to fecure the quiet and peaceable enjoyment of the remainder. Perfons in the lower and more laborious fituations of life, which do not admit of their present contribution in money, will have an opportunity, in case of an actual invasion, of aiding their country, not lefs effectually, by their perfonal services and labour, which the public funds will compensate, which the public gratitude will reward and honour.

It were, however, to think very inadequately of the danger which the present measure is calculated to afford the means of repelling, to consider it merely as one menacing property or a deprivation of consoirs. The invasion of an enemy always excites horrors along with it infinitely beyond what those terms express. But in the invasion of such an enemy, and so implacable and determined as ours, we need not afful the imagination to conceive the devastation, the crucity, and the outrage which it would let loose oppon every class and description of people. If the labourer or the contager should flatter himself, that he is false in the lowliness of has sincern which they have invasted: he knows not that misery which the hostile actuals of France-have brought upon every nation which they have invasted: he knows not that it is the inevitable consequence of such invasion, that the poor man's cottage must have in valid the wife of his bosom, and that even his innocent inf let him recoilect his own personal share of the danger; let him remember, that in every country which has submitted to the arms of France, the inhabitants, without distinction, have been dragged by tyrannical requisition into the ranks of the invading army; and that their lives, as well as liberay, are held at the will of their unsecling conquerors.

Whether the exections of a nation are to be proportioned to the evils the has reason to sear, or to the beffings she must wish the prefere, this conjusty way surely he careful at the research.

the evils the has reason to fear, or to the blessings she must wish to prefere, this country may furely be expected, at the present crisis, to make those of the most firenous and determined fort. There needs not any comparison with other countries or other governments, to petceive the many advantages which Britain enjoys as a nation, which Britons enjoy as individuals: National independence, and private liberty, the sources of public and private prosperity—perfect security to our property, and freedom to our persons—mild and falutary laws, executed and enforced with an distributed for individuals. vate proferity—perfect fecurity to our property, and freedom to our perfons—mild and falutary laws, executed and enforced with an inviolable regard to the rights and fafety of individuals—the highest encouragements and rewards to honest individuals—the highest encouragements and rewards to honest individuals—the highest encouragements and rewards to honest individuals—the highest encouragements in the people, to which every advancement in wealth, in honour, or in station, is open—these are the peculiar blessings of which this country is in possession, of whatever had the people, to which every outper our fellows, every one, of whatever station or condition, to retain the possession of them, to defend them against the attacks of those who would wreft them from us, and who would give in their stead, our property to requisition or pillage, our perfons to imprisonment, our lives to the guillotine? Such has been the fate of countries which they pretended, according to their expression, to straternise. What then must we expect, against whom they declared the most releasters and vindictive war; of whom they have pronounced France to be for much the determined and irre-concileable foe, as, that "France and Britain cannot exist to getter."

countries they subdue. They war not only with the indepen-dence of nations, the property and the safety of men, but with the worship of God! They have overturned in their own counand would overturn in every country where their armie ald he victorious, Christianity, religion, all belief of a Deity They would frike out from the minds of men all the reftrain and all the rewards of religion! They have thut e churches against devotion, they have sealed the tomb against hope! They would tear from the bosom of assistation all the support and confolation which the sense of a God, to succour and to comfort. can, in many cases, alone bestow! They would cut off, from the various sufferings of humanity, that blessed prospect of a source state, which enables a good man patiently to endure of a foture flate, which enables a good man patiently to endure them; which cheers the heart of poverty, which smooths the pillow of sickness, which closes the eyes of the dying in peace!

When we fully consider the importance of that measure which is to provide a defence for blessings of such deep concern, either in a temporal or religious point of view, it is considently hoped, that, with the promotion of sich a measure, no party-considerations will be allowed to interfere. The present is no question of party, no contest in the rivalship of power, no struggle for the possession of place; the Country itself is at stake; and it were the extreme of folly, as well as of want of virtue, to allow positical or personal animosity to prevent those exertions which are to save it from one common and general ruin. The enemy, we may know from the experience general ruin. The enemy, we may know from the experience of other countries, make no diffinition. They acknowledge none of that partiality in practice which formetimes, in order to blind and miflead the diffcontented in other countries, they hold forth in their declarations. In the Stricts which they onquer, they involve in one common destruction every inhabitant of every rank and condition whether friend or foe. They affect to make war only against governments; but, in reality, it is against the happiness of the people. The equality they introduce is but an equality of wretchednes; the liberty they pretend to plant is only anarchy and misrule; a state not they pretent to plant is only anarchy and mitrue; a trate not for much exempted from the reftraints, as deprived of all the protection and comforts of law and government.

It has been an objection made to the prefent measure, even by fome who heartily approve of the general principle of contributing appointary aid towards the exigencies of the flate in this crifs of national danger, that fuch party and private confiderations as we have mentioned, may induce a certain portion of the people to withhold their contributions; for that the measure now profed will become in 1600 a tay on those above with whom profed. so withhood their contributions; so that the measure now pro-posed will become in fact a tax on those alone with whom such motives have no place, leaving exempt others of a different de-feription. But what motives can there exist that should prevent any man for a common to the state of th any man from now coming forward in defence of the country to which all belong, or those bleffings which all enjoy, and to avert the evils which impend over all, from the attempt of an ambitious, infatiate, and implacable foe! We believe there are few, very few indeed, so lost to a sense of their own interest few, very few indeed, so lost to a sense of their own interest and honour, as well as the interest and honour of their country, as to hold back from this measure on any grounds of party or political resentant. But if, unfortunately, there are more persons of this discription than a good or wise man can believe to exist, that circumstance only doubles and enhances our obligation to supply the shameful deficiency which such a desertion of their own and their country's cause would occasion. If we fail in this important contest, of what value is that property which we thus siggardly withhold? if we prevail in the glorious struggle, what man will say that we have bought our blessings at too dear a price? dear a price?

It is to be remembered, that the facrifices, if they can be called (ach, for which we plead, are only of a temporary nature. The enemy fland as much in need of peace as our felves; but they make a desperate effort with the hopes of intimidating those whom they have in vain attempted to subdue, of damping exertions of which they know the power. By a strenuous application of our public and private resources at this moment, we have every reason to hope for a peace at no very distant period; a peace which, if we have courage and virtue to maintain a position that may procure it on just and honourable terms, will, in all probability, place this country in a situation of unexampled prosperity; a prosperity which, as far as human things may assign to the permanence, bids fair to be permanent, because of a nature which other countries have no grounds either to envy or to to permanency, bids fair to be permanent, which other countries have no grounds either to envy or to which other countries have no grounds either to envy or to fear. The aggrandizement of an ambitious and conquering power, fuch as France, is built on the ruins of other nations the profperity of Britain, founded on her commerce, her and her manufactures, courts for these ends, and therefore ne ceffarily promotes the general prosperity and happiness of Europe.

ope. In the above plain and fhort exposition, this matter is state In the above plain and thort expolition, this matter is flated on the ground of mere interest and expediency. But, if it shall be allowed to appeal, to British seeling and British honour, what powerful incitements do not they hold forth to the adoption of this measure? Will the people of Scotland, a nation ever distinguished for the vigour and energy with which they have struggled for their Independence, and resisted every attempt to consiste their country; will they bear to have it supposed, that, like Holland, Sardinia, and Genoa, Great Britain shall submit to bow the knee to France; to put on tamely the shackles she chuses to impose; to barter, like less happy states, our Laws, our Constitution, our Liberties, our Religion, for the arbitrary oppression, the systematic tyranny, the sanguiary and destructive anarchy, the profligate and hopeles atteins, which in every country that they have either subdued or fraternized, which, even in the bosom of their own country, the rulers of France have encouraged or established? Will they endure the supposition, that Britons could meanly grudge a pittance of that wealth which the blessings of a happy Government and Constitution have diffused among them, in order to preserve those blessings, to secure the independence and freedom of their country, to maintainthe happiness, the virtue, and the religion of Mankind.

SLATE QUARRY OF BAECHELISH.

To be LET for such a number of years as can be agreede, from Whitfunday 1798.

THE SLATES quarried at Balachelish, are in point if quality allowed to be inferior to none in the Highland of Scotland.—The quarry is within a hundred yards of the sa upon that arm thereof, called Lochlin and Lochleven, dividing the county of Argyle from that of Inverness. Ships of large dimension can place themselves close to the shore, in good acheorage ground, within a most safe harbour, where they lie is the greatest security, as well in winter as in summer; and a Quay, already half formed by nature, may be erecked at a vin small expence immediately below the quarry. The rock, which is of a beautiful blue state, is inexhaustible, presenting a sac of some hundred yards of an uninterrupted quarry, where it is now opened, which, owing to its situation as the base of a steep hill, can be carried to double the present extent of surface upon a natural level.

The MAINS of LAROCKI and its season as a can be agreeded.

The MAINS of LAROCH extending to fome hundred Se the MALSS of LARCUCTI extending to fome hundred son arres of arable and meadow land, are to be let along with the flate quarry for the accommodation of the workmen. On the mains was lately built a neat commodious dwelling-house, prefently occupied by Mr Stevenson, thetacksman, with a fufficient steading of office-houses built with stone and lime, and the workmen's houses are in general in good order. The premises were the surther advantage of being in a course; about miles have the further advantage of being in a country abounding with lime-flone, which can be had without any other expense than the burning and the gathering of it; and if offerers incline they may further be accommodated with an extensive farm, it for the pasture of sheep and black cattle.

Few undertakings promise more advantage to mercantile al-venturers, whose dealings and transactions enable them to rea-the tull benefit of it, by forming proper correspondence with different countries, than the present. To these it is an object worthy of attention.

For forther particulars, application may be made to Captain Dugald Stewart of the Invalids, at Fort Augustus, or Coll Mandonald, writer to the fignet, Edinburgh, to either of whom propolals are to be made, which, in case of not being accepted, shall be not force of the second of the captain of the
